How College Writing Differs from High School:

Essays that Welcome Uncertainty and Seek out Debates Lead to True Growth

In high school, teachers who asked me to write personal essays or expository papers typically rewarded what Smith describes as "the emotions and knowledge that the students already know well" (123). On other hand, success in college means being ready to "explore an idea, probe an issue, solve a problem, or make an argument that compels us to turn to outside help" (Gibaldi 2). That phrase "turn to outside help" is a good definition of what it means to research – to search
